Keynote speakers

Professor Leyla Neyzi is an anthropologist and oral historian based at the Faculty of Arts and Social Sciences, Sabanci University, Istanbul. Neyzi's research has focused on national identity, minorities, youth and subjectivity in Turkey. She has published extensively in English and Turkish. She is the author of the book, "Speaking to One Another: Personal Memories of the Past in Armenia and Turkey." She is currently working on postmemories of youth in Eastern and Western Turkey and in a transnational metropolis.

Jeffrey Olick is Professor of Sociology and History at the University of Virginia. His books include The Collective Memory Reader (with Vered Vinitzky-Seroussi and Daniel Levy); Guilt and Defense: Theodor W. Adorno on the Legacies of National Socialism in Postwar Germany (with Andrew Perrin); The Politics of Regret: On Collective Memory and Historical Responsibility: and In the House of the Hangman: The Agonies of German Defeat, 1943-1949. He is currently working on a new project concerning "secular theodicies" of evil and suffering, as well as on various topics in sociological theory.

Claus Leggewie is since August 2007 director of the Institute for Advanced Study in the Humanities Essen (KWI) and since 2012 he is Co-Director of the Käte Hamburger Collegium "Political Cultures of World Society" at University of Duisburg-Essen. Since December 2008 he is also a member of the German Advisory Council on Global Change (WBGU). He is director of the project Climate and Culture. Leggewie has written several books and papers on European conflicts of memory and the politics of history.

Michael Rothberg is Professor of English and Conrad Humanities Scholar at the University of Illinois at Urbana-Champaign, where he is also Director of the Holocaust, Genocide, and Memory Studies Initiative. His latest book is Multidirectional Memory: Remembering the Holocaust in the Age of Decolonization (2009), published by Stanford University Press in their "Cultural Memory in the Present" series. He is also the author of Traumatic Realism: The Demands of Holocaust Representation (2000) and co-editor of The Holocaust: Theoretical Readings (2003) with Neil Levi. Together with Yasemin Yildiz and Andrés Nader he won a 2011-2012 ACLS Collaborative Research Fellowship for a co-authored book on immigration and Holocaust memory in contemporary Germany.

Daniel Levy is Associate Professor of Sociology. As a political sociologist he is interested in issues of globalization, collective memory studies and comparative-historical sociology. He has been exploring the global diffusion of human rights norms and their impact on questions of nation-state legitimacy. The result of this research is a monograph entitled Human Rights and Memory (co-authored with Natan Sznaider, Penn State University Press, 2010). He is also co-editor of The Collective Memory Reader (with Jeffrey Olick and Vered Vinitzky-Seroussi, Oxford University Press, publication date 2011). Since 2006 he has been an editor for the Rose Series, a joint publication from the American Sociological Association and the Russell Sage Foundation. He is co-organizer of an interdisciplinary Initiative for the Historical Social Sciences. In 2009 he co-founded the Columbia University Seminar on History, Redress and Reconciliation, which he is co-chairing with Elazar Barkan. His interest in memory studies is also reflected in the Memory Studies Bank, which serves as a virtual bibliographic repository for the field of memory studies.
