
Concrete structures often crack,
and that's not the only snag.
Engineers hold themselves back,
building future's really black.

And then, with admirable ardour,
scientists supplemented concrete with fibre.
They played with it still a bit,
and here it comes, the strain-hardening composite.
