Master thesis available!

Working topic: Attitudes towards exposure treatment in psychotherapists in private practice

As part of the PROTECT-AD P7 project, a large psychotherapist survey was conducted to improve the treatment of anxiety disorders in behavioural care practice. The frequency of the application of exposure-based interventions in patients with anxiety disorders as well as general conditions for and barriers to the implementation of these procedures in outpatient routine practice were investigated.

In the near future, a follow-up survey will be conducted with established colleagues in the area of the East German Chamber of Psychotherapists and the North Rhine-Westphalian Chamber of Psychotherapists. This is a combined postal and online survey focusing on the attitudes of therapists towards exposure.

We are looking for a committed Master’s student who would like to take an in-depth look at this current healthcare-related topic.

Start: immediately (15.9.2018)

If you are interested please contact us: Elena Rumin, Dipl.-Psych.; Tel: 0351-46336936; E-mail: elena.rumin@tu-dresden.de or juergen.hoyer@tu-dresden.de

---
