

Die TU Dresden embodies an appreciative university culture

Dear Readers,

TU Dresden stands for democratic, solidary, unprejudiced and respectful cooperation. We value the variety of perspectives and the different realities of life of our members.

Our cooperation in research, teaching and administration as well as our coexistence on campus are therefore based on appreciation, cosmopolitanism and curiosity.

According to TU Dresden's rules and regulations as well as the guideline for dealing with harassment, discrimination and violence, behavior that endangers or disturbs the peaceful and respectful interaction of members, relatives and guests of the university or the free and tolerant climate of the university is to be refrained from.

The posting of contemptuous, unconstitutional or violence glorifying notices is therefore prohibited. Violators will be prosecuted.

Please direct any complaints to the Department of Facility Management, IGM at:
✉ igm@tu-dresden.de

Furthermore, we ask you as members of TU Dresden for your vigilance and your courageous intervention when incidents of harassment, discrimination or violence occur. You will find any support you need here:

Thank you very much.

Kind regards,

Vice-Rector University Culture
